The Fightin' Texas Aggie Band Colby Ryan

*B-Company Streetfighters '14
Texas A&M Midshipmen Battalion
Recruiting Officer*

The Fightin' Texas Aggie Band is nationally known for its precision military marching formations on the football gridiron and is the largest military marching band in the nation. This 300+ member, Corps of Cadets unit is the official marching band of Texas A&M University.

Performing at all home football games and several away games, this organization is one of the most traveled collegiate marching bands in the nation. The Aggie Band operates under strict military guidelines as an integral part of the Corps of Cadets.

Prospective members of the Aggie Band are required to have had both high school playing and marching band experience. Membership in the Aggie Band requires full participation in all required activities of the Corps of Cadets in addition to those required of the Aggie Band.

The Texas Aggie Band now rehearses Monday through Friday, 7:00 – 9:00 AM. Aggie Band members receive one academic credit for each semester of participation in the band.

Colby is the son of Ray & Nichole Ryan and a local boy done good. Here are some highlights of Colby's interests:

“Texas A&M Corps of Cadets, The Fightin' Texas Aggie Band Running long distances for no reason, US Navy Nuclear Propulsion, Mother Lode Music, Mountain Light Gallery, Amador Track & Field, Texas A&M Department of Nuclear Engineering, and Amador XC.”

He is home for the summer, but my bet is that he is looking forward to returning to whatever he enjoys in Texas. Congratulations Colby – you make us Proud!
